PREFACE.

This book is published with the hope that many of the Ford family will be interested in knowing of their ancestry, and with the desire to promote acquaintance among relatives who are widely scattered.

The ancestry of Ansel Ford is given as far as can be ascertained from the Probate Records of Boston and Plymouth, town records of Weymouth and Abington, Mass., and other sources.

It is not customary to give the ancestry of two families in one record, but as Ansel Ford married Deborah Tower and their ancestors came to Plymouth shortly after the Pilgrims landed, and in years after their ancestors were among the first settlers and pioneers of Western Massachusetts before the town of Cummington was incorporated, and as the two names became linked in marriage I thought it proper to give the ancestors of Deborah Tower.

All of the descendants of Ansel and Deborah (Tower) Ford are given, with the residence of those now living as far as can be ascertained.

Acknowledgment is hereby made to many friends for valuable assistance rendered in collecting the material which is included in this work.

A Short History of Cummington, Mass. at An Early Day.

The State of Massachusetts sold to John Cummings, in the year 1762, a tract of land for £1,800, which included the township of Cummington and more land. During the first years of settlement measures were taken to induce parties to purchase land and build here. In September, 1764, the owners of the town agreed to give Charles Prescott one hundred acres of land if he would build a saw-mill on the north end of lot No. 45. This was the first mill in the town, but being back as it was on the hills it soon gave way to the more substantial and easily accessible mills built on the Westfield river, now Cummington Village. The town was incorporated in 1779. The foundation of the old mill can yet be seen and a few rods from it is a clear spot of ground of a few rods square with a hollow place in the center, now grassed over. Nearby are a few old apple trees with moss-covered limbs, and an old lilac bush. This is all that now marks the spot where Ansel Ford lived after he married Deborah Tower; a majority of their children were born here. What was once his farm and productive is now grown up to heavy timber, but the hills, rocks and hollows, and the brook that used to run the mill is still there. Well up on the hill from the village of Cummington, and before you get to the place where the mill was, is a large stone chimney. Here is where Ezekiah Ford (6th) lived, and where Ansel Ford was born, and about one-fourth of a mile beyond the foundation of the mill was an old house. Twenty-five years ago it was brown and weather-worn, but having still about it many marks of its old-time beauty. It is known as the old Stephen Tower place. The house stood on a steep hill-side so that the rear door entered the second story. Stepping inside I found four large rooms each with a large open fire-place. In the kitchen a large bake oven. In one room I saw the name of Anna Tower, in another Stephen Tower. He was once the owner of the place. He built the house in 1784 and hauled the lumber from Dalton, a distance of twenty miles, with a yoke of oxen. The nails used in building the house were hand-made, and said to have been made by Heziah Ford (the 5th). In its day it was one of the finest farms in the town. The big, old house with its large chimney, stood firm on its foundation, and overlooked the little valley below. About it in its day were several out-buildings and two large barns, one now standing and the foundations of the other buildings can yet be seen. One year ago, one room on the first floor and one in the basement of the old house were still hanging to the old chimney; the balance of the house was torn down and taken away. Three generations of Towers lived in this house. The farm is now abandoned, a part of it being used for pasture, and it can be truthfully said that these farms once fed some of the highest intellectual life in the State.

Dear Sir,

Your letter of 11 inst with $5.00 and request for a few books of Good Geography is recd.

I send you by mail 10 books, when I wrote you I did not intend you should pay for them, and I thank you for the remittance this is more money than I have received from the sale of the books before, John Good of Cleveland gave me $1.00 for 4 then after I concluded to give them away (because I could not be troubled over selling them over a long time). I sent him 4 more I now have - from the 450 books 20 left, and I thank you again for the $5.00 but I wish I never rather you had not sent the money, and now as this is all sales as long to you, I am

Respectfully yours
